Nothing but a sense of duty, therefore, can compel me to raise my voice against the growing military fever of the American people. Let me confess at once to a deep interest in military matters. In my travels, I have become familiar with the armies of Germany, France, Italy, Austria, and especially of Switzerland. Everywhere the tread of soldiery, the drums, the crack of musketry have attracted me. It has been part of my work in historical research, to visit and examine battlefields, to learn something about tactics and strategy. At one time, I imagined that a great military establishment was just what was needed in the United States to weld public spirit into a more vigorous form, to divert the attention of our men from the present all devouring commercialism, and to give our male population a much needed set-up. That is what I thought until I began to study social and economic questions, and to realize that militarism is a part of the old order of things which the world is outgrowing. Whatever the glories of its past may be, the regular army of the United States is to-day an antiquated survival - as out of place in this progressive nation of sixty-five millions as would be a coat of mail upon a modern battlefield, or a wooden ship in the next naval encounter. No army of mercenaries deserves popular support; and in truth, even to raise...
